The Royal Black Institution is set to raise funds to help a Belfast care facility increase its capacity to provide respite care for service veterans. Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William

Anderson, is appealing to Sir Knights across the Institution to "put their shoulder to the wheel" and get behind this year's Designated Charity appeal for The Somme Nursing Home.

The nursing home caters for ex-service personnel as well as those who have served with the police, prison, fire, ambulance service and mercantile marine.

Money donated by the Royal Black Institution will be used by the home to provide additional short-term respite care accommodation, for which there is a growing demand from ex-RIR, UDR and RUC personnel.

The Royal Black Institution has raised upwards of £800,000 for various designated charities on a biennial basis since 2002.

This year, the Sovereign Grand Master is hoping Sir Knights will be able to raise £100,000 for The Somme Nursing Home.

"I have no doubt that Sir Knights will once again rise to the challenge of our latest appeal, and in doing so, help those brave men and women who gave so much throughout their lives to ensure our safety at home and abroad," said Rev Anderson.

Message from the Sovereign Grand Master

The days are beginning to lengthen and get a little warmer as we say goodbye to the winter and look forward to the spring and summer of 2020.

However, in looking forward we are challenged to take a retrospective glance back over the uncertainties that have surrounded us during the last few months. Brexit, a new government in Westminster, the growing demand for greater regional autonomy within the UK, and the agreement to return to local government in Northern Ireland against the backdrop of amendments to our abortion and marriage laws, the Irish language, and legacy issues - these are just some of the uncertainties we have faced, and will continue to face. There is no doubt that our culture and our Reformed Faith is under attack and that the days ahead will require much patience and forbearance as we, as a Protestant people, continue to come under pressure from those personalities and groups who would simply want us and what we hold dear - to go away.

So how are we to respond to such pressure? Well, I strongly believe that we need a vision for our people map for all the Protestant people of our nation. Such a vision must include our faith and cultural identity delivering a goal that assures us that we have a future. This vision is much needed to overcome the relentless push by republicans and nationalists for a united Ireland and the break-up of the United Kingdom. Surely we, as a Protestant people, have the determination within ourselves, and along with our friends in America, Australasia and Great Britain, to overcome this tide of popularism and take control of our own destiny? We all have our part to play - to fail will consign our young people to an uncertain future.

that simply sets out a road

The Royal Black Institution will continue to play its part by providing a space for our people to pray for God's guidance and to learn and grow in the Reformed Christian Faith. Our witness for 2020 in our processions will focus on our vision encapsulated in my Vision Plan presented to Grand Council in December 2019, and summed up in the strapline:

To shape the future by preserving our heritage through a confident Institution ready to share the Reformed Christian Faith with the world.

This work has already begun. We have delivered a copy of the Gospel of John to every member of our Institution to help them in their walk of faith. The year 2020 will also mark another milestone for our Institution as we begin construction work on the development of our new headquarters in the village of Loughgall, Co Armagh. Both these projects - along with the delivery of a training plan to provide educational support to our members - will provide many opportunities for us as an Institution to play our part in developing a secure future and focus for the Protestant people.

So, there is much work to be done. We have the capacity to deliver; now all that is required is personal commitment. I strongly believe that our Institution, by providing the opportunity for personal commitment in Faith and Practice, will create a passion that will enable our people to be confident in their future, and together we will stand in God's strength, proclaiming, "The Lord is my helper; I will not be afraid. What can mere mortals do to me?" (Hebrews 13: 6).

Royal Black to raise funds

The Royal Black Institution is set to raise funds to help a Belfast care facility increase its capacity to provide respite care for service veterans.

Over the course of the year, members of the Loyal Order will embark on various fundraising initiatives for The Somme Nursing Home, which caters for ex-service personnel as well as those who have served with the police, prison, fire, ambulance service and mercantile marine.

Money donated by the Royal Black Institution will be used to increase the capacity of the home, enabling it to offer new respite care accommodation, for which there is a growing demand from ex-RIR, UDR and RUC personnel.

The Royal Black Institution has raised upwards of £800,000 for various designated charities on a biennial basis since 2002.

In 2018, the Institution raised £77,500 for Child Evangelism Fellowship (CEF) to help the Christian outreach organisation build a new recreation centre for young people in Kilkeel.

This year, the Sovereign Grand Master is hoping Sir Knights will be able to raise £100,000 for The Somme Nursing Home.

"I am delighted to announce that our Institution-wide Designated Charity for 2020 is The Somme Nursing Home," said Rev William Anderson.

"The home is a magnificent facility which provides excellent care to our courageous veterans.

the home has developed plans to build a shortterm residential care facility within its premises – the only thing holding them back is finance.

"One of the core objectives of the Royal Black Institution is to engage in Christian and charitable outreach. We have donated hundreds of thousands of pounds to charities, large and small, over the years.

"I have no doubt that Sir Knights will once again rise to the challenge of our latest appeal, and in doing so, help those brave men and women who gave so much throughout their lives to ensure our safety at home and abroad."

Inside the Somme Nursing Home in Belfast

A proud tradition of nursing care

The Somme Nursing Home is managed by the Trustees of the Ulster Volunteer Force Hospitals, a charity established in 1914 to provide treatment and care for service and ex-service men.

The Trust ran a number of hospitals in Northern Ireland but the need dwindled over the years. By 1969, only two were left – at Craigavon House, on the Circular Road, Belfast, and Galwally in south Belfast. It was decided to concentrate all resources at Craigavon, the UVF Hospital. Galwally was closed and the patients moved to a new wing, "The Somme Wing", which was built at Craigavon.

By the late 1980s, the UVF Hospital was in need of modernisation. The Trustees decided to close the hospital and open a registered nursing home in the Somme Wing, which was to be extended and upgraded.

As a result, the Somme Hospital opened in September 1992 and the UVF Hospital finally closed its doors. In March 1995, the name was changed to "The Somme Nursing Home".

The nursing home was made up of 35 beds consisting of six open wards, two double rooms and one single room. The atmosphere, whilst bright and cheerful, was more suited to a small hospital than a home. Numbers were dropping and it was clear that families wanted single rooms for their relatives.

In response to this, in 1998, the Trustees sold the Nightingale wards of the old UVF Hospital and the attached wall garden. The money went towards a major building and renovation progamme providing single rooms with en suite accommodation.

Today, the home caters for 50 residents in a homely environment where compassion and understanding of the needs of the ex-service resident is of paramount importance.

Admission may be for long term, convalescent or respite care.

New robes presented to They're beautiful robes and a wonderful memorial to Millar Farr."

Frank Arnold, a past master of Greeves Memorial RBP 641, made the comment after new ceremonial robes were presented to the Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William Anderson.

RBP 641 purchased the new garments and gifted them to the Royal Black as a visible tribute to former Sovereign Grand Master, the late Millar Farr – who himself was a member of RBP 641.

Rev Anderson took receipt of the new robes at a special gathering held at the Sloan's House Museum of Orange Heritage in Loughgall on Monday, November 11.

With the old robes coming to the end of their natural life, Rev Anderson sought out Sir Knight Arnold for help in tracking down a suitable manufacturer of ceremonial dresswear.

Mr Arnold then suggested to his fellow Sir Knights in RBP 641 – based in the townland of Boland, near Dungannon – that the preceptory purchase the new robes for the Royal Black as a tribute to their own illustrious former member.

To a man, everyone in RBP 641 agreed to the proposal.

"We found a company in Belfast to make the robes - the problem was getting the actual material," explained Sir Knight Arnold.

"The material used in the old robes was grosgrain – nowadays, you can only buy it by the bale. I didn't think we needed a full bale so we opted for the material you see tonight, and it's turned out very well indeed.

"We followed the previous design exactly. I borrowed the old robes, and had them made as an exact replica, the only small difference is the front vestment was made a slightly different length, but otherwise it is exactly the same design."

Sir Knight Arnold - who was Worshipful Master of RBP 641 for 18 years and Deputy Master for 13 years before that – has enjoyed a long friendship with the Farr family.

"Actually, Millar wasn't yet in the Preceptory when I joined. I joined the same time as his late brother, Ivan.

New ceremonial robes were presented to Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William Anderson, at a special meeting at Sloan's House Museum of Orange Heritage in Loughgall last November. Pictured are: Sir Knight Garnet Chambers, Grand Master of Ceremonies; David Livingstone, Imperial Grand Treasurer; Margaret Farr, widow of the late Millar Farr; Rev William Murphy, Grand Chaplain; Billy Scott, Imperial Grand Registrar; and Rev William Anderson, Sovereign Grand Master, wearing his new robes.

"Ivan and I were in the Territorials together. Sadly, Ivan died as a 20-year-old in 1966 from a tumour. Millar joined the preceptory thereafter. So yes, I've a long association with the Farr family."

Sir Knight Arnold was understandably proud that the robes had turned out so well in honour of a man they so greatly miss.

"Millar was the Sovereign Grand Master but he was also the greatest wind-up artist in our preceptory. You had to watch him! If he came late into a meeting, even if it was the middle of summer, he would say, 'Sorry Worshipful Master, snow drifts in Tullyhogue.' "These robes are a great tribute to Millar from the preceptory."

At the meeting in Loughgall, the robes were dedicated by Grand Chaplain, Rev William Murphy.

Greeves Memorial decided they would like to come out of Boland for the occasion, and the meeting and supper afterwards was a great success. They were joined by fellow Sir Knights from their own locality – who Sir Knight Arnold described as "friends of Boland" - as well as a host of senior dignitaries of the Institution.

Also in attendance were members of Mr Farr's family, including his widow, Margaret.

"I am very thankful to Greeves Memorial for inviting me along here tonight," said Mrs Farr.

"It's a pleasure to be here and have my family with me. The new robes look very nice indeed. My husband would be very proud."

Rev Anderson said he felt humbled to receive the new robes and pledged that he would wear them with "great pride and dignity".

"I am delighted to receive these robes," said Rev Anderson.

"They're a wonderful gift in memory of the late Millar Farr, who served this Institution as Sovereign Grand Master for 10 years and gave it a great boost during his chairmanship.

"I will be forever grateful to Greeves Memorial RBP 641 for this kind gesture and can assure them the robes will be worn with great pride and dignity for many years to come."

Rev Anderson was also delighted that the Farr family was able to attend the evening. "It's important we show that although the life of the Institution continues, we still remember Millar – and I know his family really appreciate that.

"The wife of a Sovereign Grand Master sacrifices a great deal – her husband is always out, attending Royal Black business. So it's important we thank the family for sharing their loved one with us."

The old robes will be displayed on mannequins in the Royal Black's proposed new headquarters in Loughgall.

The new "Millar Farr robes" will now go into service with the Sovereign Grand Master, who intends to take them far and wide on official business.

"We still wear ceremonial robes in the Royal Black Institution," said Rev Anderson.

"It brings a great deal of dignity to a Grand Council meeting.

"And it is my intention, travelling around the world, to bring them with me, along with the Molyneaux Mace, so that all of the true ceremony can be seen in the various jurisdictions by Sir Knights who would otherwise have no opportunity to see them."

Gospel Goal scores a winner with new pitchside board ospel Goal was formed in September 2015 after a meeting in Banbridge Orange Hall, Co Down. Their mission statement is: "To proclaim the VICTORY of JESUS to the entire football scene, and WIN every player, supporter and official for HIM."

Their vision is: "To bring the Word of God to where it never was before, and thereby turn people who think that God has no relevance to them into true believers."

This is done in a variety of ways, but primarily through the erection of pitchside Gospel boards at grounds and pitches right across Northern Ireland and beyond.

At present they have been able to erect pitchside Gospel boards at: 10 NIFL Premiership grounds, including Windsor Park, Stangmore Park, Mourneview Park, the Oval and Solitude; one Scottish Premiership ground (Ibrox Stadium, Glasgow, home of Rangers FC); four NIFL Championship grounds; and numerous lower league 3G and 4G pitches.

They have also distributed thousands of football-related Gospel tracts at games across the country and been able to bring a Gospel message to many other football games and competitions through sponsorship and via other means.

Their latest project was the erection of a pitchside Gospel board at Lakeview Park, the home of Loughgall Football Club. A spokesman for Gospel Goal said: "The group is indebted to the officers and members of Loughgall District LOL No 3 and Summerisland RBDC No 6 for their invaluable assistance in erecting and financing the board."

He added that they also passed on their thanks to Sam Nicholson, David Johnstone and the board and members of Loughgall Football Club for all their assistance in erecting the board.

The new board was officially dedicated by the Royal Black Institution's Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William Anderson, in the presence of representatives of both Districts, Loughgall FC and Gospel Goal.

Gospel message delivered to every Sir Knight

Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William Anderson, receives his copy of 'The Gospel according to St John' from Grand Chaplain, Raymond Adams.

Il members of the Royal Black Institution are set to receive a booklet which will help them understand the Gospel message.

"The Gospel according to St John" has been produced by the Chaplains' Committee.

Sir Knight Raymond Adams, Grand Chaplain, presented Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William Anderson, with the first copy at the recent meeting of Imperial Grand Council in Cookstown.

Rev Anderson explained: "For some considerable time, it has been the vision of the chaplains of the Institution to promote and encourage all members to read God's Word daily.

"The distribution of 'The Gospel according to St John' booklet is part of that vision.

"There is a clear message in St John's Gospel which helps the reader to understand the truth about God, the truth about Eternity and the truth about making a choice to accept Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour."

The booklet contains opening messages from the Sovereign Grand Master and the Chaplains' Committee, plus a 30-day reading plan to encourage Sir Knights to understand the Gospel message. "The booklets will be distributed to all members of the Institution free of charge, with the earnest prayer that all who read it will find God's way of Salvation for their lives now and for Eternity," said Rev Anderson.

After receiving his copy, the Sovereign Grand Master thanked the chaplains for their work and vision in producing the booklet, and urged all members of Imperial Grand Council to ensure that the publication is not only distributed, but that it is read, and that the chaplains' message at the beginning is prayerfully considered and responded to.

Sovereign Grand Master sets out his vision

he Sovereign Grand Master has laid out his vision for the Royal Black Institution.

The Loyal Order must seek to "shape the future by preserving our heritage through a confident Institution ready to share the Reformed Christian Faith with the world", said Rev William Anderson.

The Royal Black's top official was speaking at a recent meeting of the organisation's governing body.

The Imperial Grand Council is made up of Imperial officers, together with officers from various County and Provincial Chapters from across the Institution.

December's meeting was held in Cookstown under the auspices of the County Tyrone Grand Black Chapter, who had made excellent arrangements for the gathering.

Sir Knights heard how Rev Anderson's strategy was rooted in Scripture. The Sovereign Grand Master revealed how his principal motivation came from Proverbs 29 verse 18: "Where there is no vision the people perish."

Upon his election to the top post in June 2018, Rev Anderson initiated a series of workshops across the Province. These informal seminars allowed the Royal Black's leadership team to listen directly to the views of members and hear feedback on a range of issues.

The Sovereign Grand Master said that having prayerfully considered how to deliver the outcomes from the workshops, he felt the Institution needed to focus on two broad areas of policy – voluntary work and regulatory compliance.

"If we are to achieve our vision of creating a strong and healthy organisation which can proclaim the Reformed Christian Faith, then we need all our members to be working to the highest standards across the whole of the Institution," said Rev Anderson.

"We will initiate training and educational support so that members will acquire new skills, thereby encouraging teamwork across both voluntary and regulatory areas within the Institution."

Rev Anderson said that, as an organisation in which the vast majority of work is undertaken by volunteers, it was essential that the Institution remained a viable and robust part of community and faith life. To achieve this, the Royal Black will provide a space where members can be taught the principles of the Reformed Faith and encouraged to evangelise and support others within their community.

On the issue of regulation, Rev Anderson said that a new Compliance Team would be established to make sure the Royal Black is meeting its obligations under current - and any future - legislation.

The Sovereign Grand

Master concluded that, in order to ensure delivery of their objectives, all members of Grand Council needed to ensure that there was the required response at all levels, with action in appropriate areas, backed up with prayer for strength "in the understanding that when God calls, He equips".

Rev Anderson's vision statement was received by a standing ovation, with many encouraging comments made by those in attendance.

The meeting concluded with all being thanked for their contributions.

The Imperial Grand Council meets twiceyearly, with the next meeting due to take place on Saturday, June 20 in County Antrim.

As a Christian, I confessed my sins; so terrorists must seek forgiveness

Sir Knight Samuel Heenan was 12 years old when republican gunmen murdered his father at their rural home in 1985. Here, he tells how his Christian faith helped him deal with the horrific aftermath of his father's death, and how victims are continually retraumatised when terrorists refuse to acknowledge, repent or have justice served upon them for their evil deeds

"LEARN to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow." Isaiah 1:17.

These were the words of the prophet, Isaiah, when he offered hope, comfort and instruction to those who had lost loved ones as a result of bereavement.

This portion of Scripture is particularly relevant and resonates with many in Northern Ireland and those countries affected by terrorism and its horrific aftermath.

My own father, William, was murdered by the PIRA on May 3, 1985, at our rural home in the Dromara hills. He was forced to his knees and shot twice in the top of the head. I heard the shots and watched the gunman drive off, after which I found his bloodstained body and ran half-a-mile to raise the alarm. I was only 12 years old and had experienced the loss of my mother and grandmother three years previous.

What I endured was experienced by so many other families throughout our 'Troubles'.

Terrorism leaves a terrible legacy on the victim's life, with the emotional and psychological scaring seldom subsiding. For many, those scars never get the chance to heal as individuals sympathetic to our aggressors consistently attempt to re-write the past and eulogise those who brought misery and bloodshed to our door.

This causes re-traumatism

and ensures a range of emotions rise to the surface each time those advocating such heinous acts appear in the media.

It's right as Christians that we protect the memory and integrity of our loved ones against this onslaught – something, sadly, many within the hierarchy of the church have failed to do in the past.

As victims, it's imperative we remain strong, seek assurance, and take comfort from our creator who understands our pain.

His one and only son, the Lord Jesus Christ, paid the ultimate sacrifice on the cross at Calvary and bore the sins and wickedness of our world. The words of Isaiah instruct Christians and those within the church to offer prayerful and pastoral support to victims and be there as their voice.

As a young man, God spoke to me over a period of time; his conviction was all-empowering and in the stillness of the night I trusted Jesus Christ as my Saviour and Lord.

William Heenan, 51, was murdered by the IRA in 1985.

As Christians affected by terrorism, we must be a witness and example to the vulnerable and those still in pain. It's imperative we use our experience to help others while seeking solace and comfort in the Saviour when we experience our own challenging times.

"Cast all your care upon him; for he careth for you." 1 Peter 5:7.

He stood with me and many others as we faced the trials and tribulations of life. He was our immovable rock on which we leaned throughout those difficult periods.

In Paul's second letter to the Corinthians, he is mindful of that pain and God's sustaining grace and comfort.

"Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort; Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." 2 Corinthians 1: 3-4.

As Christians we must be truthful and faithful to the Scriptures in what they command us to do with wrong-doers. It's a requirement that justice is served on the perpetrator, which brings closure to the victims, and it's a must that the church expresses and reaffirms that Biblical requirement to provide comfort and reassurance, especially by those in positions of authority.

As Christians we confessed our sins before the Lord, expressed repentance before we received his forgiveness. The church must also reinforce that message to the perpetrators of terrorism and those who do grievous wrongs against vulnerable and innocent people.

The perpetrators of evil must demonstrate remorse if they are genuine, seek restitution from their victims through repentance, and seek the ultimate forgiveness from our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. This true peace affords us fellowship, healing and the sure and certain hope of eternity with our Saviour.

High standard on display at lecturers' conference

The leader of the Royal Black Institution has hailed an international gathering of Sir Knights as an "undoubted highlight" of his term in office to date.

Rev William Anderson made the comment after his return from the 76th International Lecturers' Conference in Manchester last September.

The event brought together members of the Loyal Order from across the UK, plus there was also a delegation from America in attendance.

Rev Anderson, who was elected to the Royal Black's top post in June 2018, said: "This was undoubtedly a highlight for me since I took up the position as Sovereign Grand Master.

"It was wonderful to be able to meet and greet Sir Knights from throughout Northern Ireland, Scotland and England together with three Sir Knights from America, making it a truly international gathering of Sir Knights.

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank the large number of Sir Knights who made the effort to travel to Manchester for the weekend of events that had been so well arranged for us by the Provincial Grand Chapter of England."

The conference on Saturday, September 21 represented a trio of "firsts" for the Institution:

- it was the first time the conference was held in Manchester;
- the first time the conference was held in a church;
- and the first conference in which Sir Knights from the United States took part.

The American presence was a particularly heartening development because it was only eight years ago that numbers had dwindled so low that the Institution was almost completely lost in the US.

But today there is a renewed interest in the Royal Black across the Atlantic, with membership growing rapidly to the extent that the US will host the International Lecturers' Conference in 2023.

The majority of conference

delegates and their wives travelled to Manchester on the Friday, staying at the Macdonald Manchester Hotel. After breakfast the next day, delegates were transported by bus to Alkrington & Providence United Reformed Church, kindly granted, where the conference got under way at 10.15am.

Degrees were exemplified by teams from England, Scotland and the US.

The Imperial Grand Lecturer, Sir Knight Ian McCafferty, congratulated all participating Sir Knights and thanked them for their dedication and commitment to the Royal Black Institution. He said the three teams had given their presentations to a very high standard.

The Sovereign Grand Master also thanked all the Sir Knights for the excellent standard of lecturing exhibited at the conference. In particular, he congratulated the team from Scotland – it was, he said, the most moving explanation and presentation of a portion of Scripture he had ever witnessed.

Past Assistant Sovereign Grand Master Sir Knight Alan Goody said he had been attending the conference for the last 32 years but this was the best he had ever experienced.

In his closing conference remarks, Rev Anderson reminded Sir Knights that the Institution was based on Biblical teachings and the degrees were an expression of the Reformed Christian Faith. The conference was closed with prayer and the National Anthem.

Later that evening, the delegates were joined by their wives for a meal in the Macdonald Hotel.

Addressing those present, Rev Anderson took as his theme that of "teamwork".

Manchester, he said, was renowned for two football teams, one in red and one in blue. But they achieved their individual success over the years by teamwork. He encouraged all present to find out God's purpose for their lives and in doing so to work with Him to achieve what He required of them.

Rev Anderson also encouraged all present to share their concerns and experiences with one another. So many people today are struggling with issues in their lives. "We need to reassure them that God loves them but most of all He desires that they turn to Him and follow in His ways," said Rev Anderson.

On Sunday, the Sir Knights joined with the congregation at Alkrington & Providence United Reformed Church for morning worship, during which Rev Anderson was the guest preacher.

The Sovereign Grand Master took as his text a verse from Matthew 5:16, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven".

He reminded the large congregation of the need for people in the outside world to see and witness how God had changed their lives through their actions and words.

Many Sir Knights left the hotel on Sunday afternoon to make their way home, however a few extended their stay until Monday afternoon.

This year's International Lecturers' Conference will be held in Co Monaghan, with the 2021 conference in Tyrone. Scotland will host the event in 2022 before the conference goes to the US in 2023.

Royal Black making a healthy

Green shoots of recovery are starting to bear fruit for the Royal Black Institution in America.

From virtual extinction just nine years ago, the Institution is making a comeback in "the land of the free and the home of the brave".

Interest is growing, preceptories are being established, and Sir Knights are being trained up as lecturers.

Many of the men now deciding to join the Royal Black in the US have no recent connection to Northern Ireland or the United Kingdom whatsoever.

Instead, they are drawn to the Institution because of its stand for the Reformed Christian Faith.

One man who has been at the forefront of spearheading efforts to encourage this American revival is Imperial Grand Lecturer Ian McCafferty.

Sir Knight McCafferty, a member of Garvagh Star of Bethlehem RBP 504 in Co Londonderry, has been there from the start of this latest Royal Black resurgence in the US. In fact, he's been over to the States four times since 2011, and is returning this July for the initiation of new members in Las Vegas.

"At its lowest, the Royal Black in America had all but disappeared, with three members and no preceptories," explained Sir Knight McCafferty.

"Now there are five preceptories and probably 55-60 members, with hopefully another 12 joining in July. Whilst it is still very small, the fact it has grown from nothing to five preceptories and 55-60 members in nine years is quite significant."

The turnaround started in Philadelphia in 2011 when four preceptories were established.

A fifth was set up in the Carolinas in 2014.

"Even in the old days, when the Royal Black was bigger in the States, there had never been anything as far south as the Carolinas," said Sir Knight McCafferty.

"In July 2020, I'm delighted to say, we are going to Las Vegas where there is a big Orange lodge, who are nearly all school teachers. There's around a dozen men coming to Vegas from various parts of the US to join the Royal Black."

The five Preceptories in America are:

Sons of Liberty RBP 1776 – Pennsylvania;

Old Dominion RBP 1607 – Virginia;

Great Lakes RBP 2011 – Ohio and Chicago;

McKinley RBP 1690 –

California; Carolina RBP 1670 – South

Carolina. Sir Knight McCafferty

attributes this remarkable growth to the "sheer enthusiasm" of the Americans themselves.

"It's inspiring," he said. "You can almost feel the energy and commitment in the room when you're with them, even though they are not steeped in the history of the Royal Black, and there's no parades."

And the Grand Lecturer is also impressed by the talent which the Royal Black is accruing in America.

"The calibre of the men who are joining the Royal Black in America is exceptional," he said.

"There are ministers, law enforcement officers, lawyers, businessmen, a college professor. A lot of them have no connection at all to Northern Ireland. They're interested in joining the Royal Black Institution simply because of its Biblical stance.

"This is encouraging because I feel it's key to how we grow and maintain the Royal Black in America – history has shown we cannot simply rely on recruitment to the Royal Black being a family tradition, because it eventually dies out."

Watching the Institution grow in America has been a privilege, said Sir Knight McCafferty, and he's loved every minute of it. But as the Imperial Grand Lecturer responsible for the teaching of degrees, it's also been hard work!

"Four of us were over to teach some guys on one occasion," recalled Sir Knight McCafferty. "We started at 6.30am. Then we went for breakfast – the guys were even practising as they walked to breakfast! We worked until lunchtime when we grabbed a sandwich. Then we worked again until 6pm.

"After dinner, the guys asked, 'Could you come down for an hour to do a bit more?" Typically, we were teaching degrees from 6.30 in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. So there's a lot of hard work during our visits to America, but it's very rewarding.

"Teaching degrees to a class in Northern Ireland would take place over two-and-half-years, in order to memorise and recite the degrees to a high standard. Some of these American guys pick it up incredibly quickly. When you see men pick it up accurately and quickly, it really encourages you. You think to yourself, 'My work here has been useful'."

Sir Knight McCafferty's work – and those of his assistants William J Campbell, David McBurney, David Hargy and Thomas McAlister – certainly has been useful.

Not only has he helped breathe new life into the Institution in America, he has developed a successful network of lecturers, so much so that the International Lecturers' Conference will be held in the United States in 2023.

"To be heading to the States in 2023 is of major significance for the Institution as a whole," said Sir Knight McCafferty.

"It has generated huge interest - I know Sir Knights who are already saving money for the trip!

"In fact, I think 2023 will be a real watershed moment for the Institution worldwide."

return in the United States

Professor Scott Buchanan, RBP 1670 South Carolina, seated front row, second right, attends the monthly meeting of RBP 504 in Garvagh Orange Hall last October.

wo Sir Knights working to strengthen the Royal Black Institution in the US are members of Carolina RBP 1670 in Charleston, South Carolina.

Both men are also members and Past Masters of President Rutledge LOL 1776, also in Charleston.

Charles A 'Cal' Stephens, 40, is a computer engineer for the US Navy. Married to Vitré, he is the father of two boys - Chase, aged seven, and two-yearold Whit. He is currently Registrar of RBP 1670 and is also a Royal Black lecturer.

Scott Eugene Buchanan, 50, has been married to Kelea for 27 years and has two daughters. A college professor, he is Pursuivant in RBP 1670.

The preceptory has 15 members and meets three to four times a year in downtown Charlestown at the Carolina Yacht Club. The preceptory is currently focused on increasing membership and becoming self-sufficient from a lecturing perspective.

"My primary ambition is to be able to bring in new members and perform quality degree work," said Sir Knight Stephens. "I believe being able to create a path for more members to be initiated will allow us to expand the number of preceptories in the USA."

Sir Knight Stephens was one of the international delegates who attended the Lecturers' Conference in Manchester last September.

[']"It was wonderful to watch England and Scotland put on some really first-class degrees," he said.

"I thoroughly enjoyed getting to meet other Sir Knights. It was also a real treat to meet the Imperial Grand Master and have him serve as chaplain for the USA degree team."

Sir Knight Buchanan agrees that he, too, is keen to see the Royal Black Institution grow in America.

"This is especially important as our society becomes increasingly secular," he said.

Sir Knight Buchanan is a Professor at The Citadel (a college in South Carolina) where he lectures in Political Science.

He is currently on sabbatical as Fulbright Chair at the University of Helsinki.

He struck up a friendship with Imperial Grand Lecturer Ian McCafferty when the Northern Ireland man attended meetings and workshops of the Institution in the US.

Last October, the college professor delighted members of Sir Knight McCafferty's private preceptory when he flew into Northern Ireland – from Helsinki – to enjoy fellowship with RBP 504 at their monthly meeting in Garvagh Orange Hall, Co Londonderry.

Sir Knight Buchanan – who lists genealogy and gardening as two of his favourite past-times - grew up in Talbot County, Georgia, where his family has lived for seven generations.

"My brother and I own the farm that belonged to my father and grandfather. Parcels of that farm date back to my greatgreat-great-great grandfather Buchanan."

Indeed, Sir Knight Buchanan suspects that his ancestors were originally from Ireland.

"I am able to get my earliest known documented ancestor to the 1750s, when he was already in the US. However, I suspect his father came from Northern Ireland."

He added: "I have ancestors who have fought in every major war the US has been involved in, from the French and Indian War through to Vietnam, with the exception of the Korean War."

Sir Knight Stephens can trace his heritage back to the settlement of Jamestown in 1607.

But he also believes there a link with

King William III.

"Family tradition holds that my ancestor, William James, originally from Wales, and who settled in Williamsburg County in South Carolina in 1732, fought with King William in the Glorious Revolution. He immigrated to South Carolina from Knockbracken, County Down, with his wife Elizabeth Witherspoon, a descendant of John Knox."

Sir Knight Stephens was born in upstate South Carolina in a small town about two hours from Charleston. He grew up on a farm. His father raises Hereford beef cattle as a hobby and has between 50 to 70 head, depending on the time of year.

A graduate of Clemson University [the 2016 and 2018 National College Football champions], Sir Knight Stephens said that in their dealings with friends and family they "typically emphasize the Christian fraternal aspect" when it comes to explaining their membership of the Orange Order and the Royal Black Institution to people not familiar with either organisation.

Faith and religion are important to both men. Sir Knight Stephens worships at the French Protestant (Huguenot) Church in Charleston, while Sir Knight Buchanan is a Presbyterian.

"My faith is the most important thing to me and the outwardly Christian mission and nature of the fraternity attracted me to the Royal Black," said Sir Knight Buchanan.

The college professor said that being a member of the Institution allows him to feel a closer attachment to his Ulster roots.

"The other attraction is being surrounded by a community of fellow Christian men," he said.

With men like Sir Knights Buchanan and Stephens working for the Institution's cause in the United States, it's clear that the Royal Black is in safe hands – and has a bright future ahead.

Assistant Sovereign Grand Master appointed

Ballymena businessman has been appointed Assistant Sovereign Grand Master of the Royal Black Institution.

Harold McCloy, 50, dedicated his term of office to his late father, Harry, who died suddenly in October, having been a member of the Loyal Order for almost 65 years.

Sir Knight McCloy - who also holds positions at preceptory, district and county level within the Institution - was appointed to his new role at the halfyearly meeting of the Imperial Grand Council in Cookstown in December.

"I wish to dedicate my term of office as ASGM to my late father, Harry McCloy," he said.

"My dad encouraged and supported me in my roles of office. If he had been alive today, this latest appointment would have made him very proud, but I know he is in his heavenly home looking down upon us."

Sir Knight McCloy is managing director of his own business, Village Blinds, based in Ballymena. Founded 28 years ago, the firm employs around 35 members of staff, and supplies products across the UK and Ireland.

He joined the Institution in 1997 and is a member of Mount Horeb RBP 270, encamped at Cullybackey, having proudly served as Worshipful Master for a two-year term. He is currently the preceptory's Treasurer.

Within Ballymena Royal Black District No. 2 (Co. Antrim), Sir Knight McCloy has held various offices over the years, including Deputy District Master (2011–2014) and District Master (2014–2017).

He is the Grand Treasurer of Co Antrim Grand Black Chapter, and at Imperial level sits on the Admin and Finance Committee. He also represents the members from Togo and Ghana on Central Committee.

Sir Knight McCloy has been married to his wife, Alison, for almost 30 years, and they have three grown-up children – Phillip, 27, Judith, 23, and 20-year-old Christopher.

"To hold my various offices, I need a very understanding wife! I thank Alison for supporting me and encouraging me over the years. Without this support, I just couldn't give my jobs my all," he said.

Sir Knight McCloy also runs a small, part-time business, 7 Towers Regalia, which supplies all types of Loyal Order regalia, with a share of profits going to charity.

"To have the honour of being appointed ASGM and to serve as one of three Assistants to our Sovereign Grand Master has been the highlight of my almost 30 years of membership," said Sir Knight McCloy.

"I promise to serve this wonderful Institution to the best of my ability, and I look forward to travelling to new places and getting to know many more members within new regions."

Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William Anderson, hailed the appointment of his new Assistant as a "great boost" for the Institution, adding: "I wish Harold God's richest blessing as he takes up his new responsibilities and I look forward to working alongside him in the three years to come.

"I know he will bring hard work, energy and enthusiasm to his new role, and his appointment is just reward for the great commitment he has shown over the years to the ideals and ethos of our beloved Institution."

Sir Knight McCloy replaces Sir Knight William Baillie who had completed his three-year term as an Assistant Sovereign Grand Master.

The Royal Black Institution has three Assistant Sovereign Grand Masters who each serve a three-year term – Harold McCloy, Richard Emerson and Colin Berry.

Re-structure taking place Down Under

The Dominion Grand Black Chapter of New Zealand and the Provincial Grand Black Chapter of New South Wales are to amalgamate their resources under a new warrant to create the Provincial Grand Black Chapter of Australasia.

The Imperial Grand Black Chapter of the British Commonwealth has a long history in New Zealand and Australia. It has been said that many Preceptories never recovered following the Great War. Particularly in Australia, there is a history of 'Boom and Bust', with mining towns becoming cities overnight and disappearing as the mines became worked out.

At its peak, Australia had Provincial Grand Black Chapters in each State, and New Zealand had a Dominion Grand Black Chapter covering both the North and South Island.

Both the DGBC of New Zealand and the PGBC of New South Wales have long and distinguished histories.

The DGBC of New Zealand was founded in 1906 and has had many distinguished members of the Royal Black Institution in the past. Currently, Sir Knight Rod Biel is a member of Grand Council, as were Bill Irvine and Robert Campbell. The New Zealanders held alternate meetings in the North and South Islands respectively.

The PGBC of New South Wales was founded in 1871. It now incorporates the Queensland Preceptory encamped in Brisbane. In June 2007, a meeting the PGBC of New South Wales was held in Brisbane for the first time. Subsequently, the half-yearly meeting has generally been held in Brisbane and the annual meeting in Sydney, a round trip of 2,000 km.

The PGBC of New South Wales has members of the Grand Council, currently Sir Knights Hilton Wickham, John Morrow and Herbert Mailey.

The Provincial Grand Black Chapter of Victoria is not at this time participating in the re-structure although the option is always open should they wish to do so in the future.

Initial discussions regarding a re-structure took place at a meeting of the then Sovereign Grand Master and his principal officers, with the Master of the PGBC of New South Wales and his deputy, in Northern Ireland back in 2009.

Indeed, it would eventually transpire that both the DGBC of New Zealand and the PGBC of New South Wales had individually come to the same conclusion - that there was a need for a restructure, and that the interests of both would be advanced by amalgamating into a joint Provincial Grand Black Chapter. Informal discussions started in 2015 in Liverpool. These discussions continued over the years until 2019 when a formal request was made to the Imperial Grand Black Chapter for the formation of the PGBC of Australasia. The IGBC Grand Council granted the request in December 2019 and kindly granted both the DGBC of New Zealand and the PGBC of New South Wales a special dispensation allowing them to keep for their original warrants for posterity.

For many years, members from New Zealand and Australia have been attending meetings of the Royal Black Institution and the Loyal Orange Institution in both countries. The cost to fly between the East Coast of Australia and New Zealand is cheaper than to fly to the West Coast of Australia.

The PGBC of Australasia will have Preceptories operating in the New Zealand North Island, Queensland and New South Wales. It is hoped a Preceptory in South Australia will be established in the near future. The PGBC of Australasia will continue to cater for unattached members - as everyone knows, it is a big continent, for example, RBP 295 in Brisbane has one Sir Knight who has a round trip of 1,200 km to attend meetings.

Those behind the re-structure believe this is a great opportunity to fully align all Preceptories and ensure they are working to the current rules and regulations of the Imperial Grand Black Chapter; it will allow Sir Knights around Australasia to meet up; and it will be a point of contact for the IGBC to help promote and advance the cause of the Royal Black Institution in Australasia.

District Chapter celebrates 125th anniversary in 2019

Ballymacarrett Royal Black District Chapter No.4 celebrated its 125th anniversary in 2019.

The District's Working Committee organised a series of events throughout the year on the District's behalf, culminating with two events in November.

When the District held its first ever meeting on November 29, 1894 it was decided to meet on the fourth Thursday of each month, which, apart from a brief period in the early 2000s when it met on the third Thursday, it still does.

The District held its 125th anniversary meeting on Thursday, November 28, 2019 and marked the occasion by presenting a cheque to its nominated charity for 2019, which was the local Survivors of Suicide Group.

No.4 District wished to support a local charity in its anniversary year, and chose Survivors of Suicide having been made aware of the excellent work this group does in the area.

The District Chapter is grateful for all the support it received during the year from people in East Belfast, and elsewhere, for its fundraising activities, which included people supporting events like charity quizzes. Thanks also go to the Union Jack Shop for donating ballot prizes.

The District Chapter is also grateful to Survivors of Suicide for attending its November District meeting to receive a £1,500 donation.

The letter from Buckingham Palace received by Ballymacarrett RBDC No.4.

The following evening (Friday, November 29, 2019) - the exact anniversary of the District Chapter's first ever meeting - the District held its 125th anniversary dinner in the Auld House, Moneyreagh.

District Master Fred McKee welcomed everyone in attendance, with Chris Cunningham, City Grand Registrar of the City of Belfast Grand Black Chapter, acting as Master of Ceremonies for the evening.

Before commencing with the meal, District Deputy Lay Chaplain Tam Boyd said Grace.

Following an excellent three course meal, the chairman of the 125th Anniversary Working Committee, Ryan McDowell, proposed the Loyal Toast to Her Majesty the Queen, during which he read a letter from the Buckingham Palace Loyal Greetings Officer extending best wishes to the District Chapter for their anniversary dinner and expressing an interest in the District's charitable activities.

The letter, signed by Miranda Hansen Lise, said: "Her Majesty was interested to learn of the series of events which have taken place throughout the year and of the beneficiary of your anniversary appeal ... The Queen sends her best wishes to all concerned for a most memorable and enjoyable Dinner marking this most significant milestone in the history of Ballymacarrett Royal Black District Chapter."

District Registrar William Craig then proposed a toast to the Royal Black Institution, which was responded to by the Sovereign Grand Master, Rev. William Anderson, who addressed the dinner on the work and purpose of the Order and extended his best wishes to the local District Chapter.

The City Grand Master of Belfast William Elliott then proposed a toast to Royal Black District Chapter No.4, which included some history relating to the Black Institution in Belfast. This was responded to by Chris Cunningham who gave some history relating to the District.

As a final act of commemoration, Rev Jason Lingiah, from the Provincial Grand Black Chapter of Scotland, then dedicated new flags for the District Chapter (a Union Flag and an Ulster Flag) in anticipation of being the lead District for the Belfast Black Saturday parade in 2021, which will mark the centenary of Northern Ireland.

Deputy District Master Harry Whiteside proposed a vote of thanks to everybody who had taken part in the anniversary event.

The dinner concluded later on in the evening with the singing of the National Anthem.

Ballymacarrett banner display and thanksgiving service

A n interesting event took place last September to mark the 125th anniversary of RBDC No 4 Ballymacarrett, Belfast.

Held in Ballymacarrett Orange Hall, the event took the form of a banner and bannerette display. Also on show were Royal Black certificates and other artefacts.

The banner display was held in conjunction with a thanksgiving service which involved four speakers talking on four of the banner themes.

Rev Mervyn Gibson, Grand Secretary of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland, explained the Bible story relating to the Burning Bush emblem; Rev William Anderson, Sovereign Grand Master of the Royal Black Institution, explained the emblem of the Open Bible; Mark Lawlor talked about the Bible story of David and Goliath; and Chris Cunningham explained the emblem of the Red Cross.

A retiring collection took place in support of the Survivors of Suicide charity.

Åfterwards, Rev Anderson said: "This event highlights the important work of our Institution in teaching our people the fundamentals of their faith as well as taking the opportunity to reach out to those struggling with mental health issues."

Event 'shines a light' on Royal Black group of Queen's University students were given an interesting insight into the history, values and traditions of the Royal Black Institution when they attended a special event at Brownlow House in Lurgan.

"Shining a Light on the Black Institution" was an informative evening which involved thoughtprovoking talks from three guest speakers: Rev William Anderson, Sovereign Grand Master; Rev Nigel Reid, Imperial Grand Chaplain, and Dr Jonathan Mattison, Curator of the Museum of Orange Heritage.

The event was organised in conjunction with Queen's Orange Society and Lurgan Royal Black District Chapter No 2, and supported by the Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland Youth Development Officer.

In addition to the QUB students, who also enjoyed a tour of the historic Brownlow House earlier in the evening, a very good attendance saw the room packed with interested members and non-members of the Institution.

Welcoming everyone along to the event - held on Tuesday, January 28 - was principal organiser and host, Ross Hall. The Lurgan man, 22, is a member of the Apprentice Boys, Orange Order and Royal Black. He joined Johnson Memorial RBP 189 in 2015 and is District Registrar of Lurgan RBDC No 2. He is also a past chairman of Queen's Orange Society.

Mr Hall gave an outline of the Drew Nelson Legacy Project, which aims to empower young people and equip the next generation of community leaders. The project was set up in memory of the Orange Order's former Grand Secretary, who died in 2016.

Mr Hall spoke about his affinity to all three Loyal Orders and appealed to each of them to push forward and develop young talent, before adding: "The future is Orange, Black and Crimson."

The first guest speaker was Dr Jonathan Mattison, who gave an interesting account of the history of the Royal Black Institution, including how, in the early years, the Royal Black Institution and the Orange Order did not enjoy the harmonious relations with each other which they do today.

In his address, the Sovereign Grand Master, Rev William Anderson, spoke about the present-day activities of the Royal Black Institution and his vision for its future.

He explained to those gathered that the Royal Black is a worldwide Institution. Its core objective is to witness for the Reformed Christian Faith. Parades are only ever held to and from a service of worship. The Royal Black Institution, said Rev Anderson, exists to give its members the opportunity to study Holy Scripture; increase knowledge of the Reformed Faith; engage in Christian and charitable outreach; and to continue and further develop social and responsible citizenship.

His vision is to see the Royal Black Institution "shape the future by preserving our heritage through a confident Institution ready to share the Reformed Christian Faith with the world".

He explained how this ambition is rooted in Scripture, as found in Proverbs 29 verse 18: "Where there is no vision the people perish."

Rev Anderson's action plan would see the Royal Black Institution seek to: extend the influence of the Reformed Faith; grow its worldwide membership; empower its members; encourage charitable giving; and improve standards.

He revealed the Institution is about to launch its next Grand Master's Appeal, which has raised almost £800k over 16 years for a number of good causes.

The final speaker was Rev Nigel Reid, Grand Chaplain and the minister of Tullyallen and Mountnorris Presbyterian Churches.

Rev Reid told how, in today's confusing world, the Royal Black Institution can provide stability, direction, guidance and encouragement.

The teaching of the Institution is Bible-based and Christ-centred, and it promotes traditional Protestant values, he said.

Rev Reid spoke about the Institution's many symbols. At the heart of the Royal Black Institution, he said, is the symbol of the Red Cross, which reminds him of God's love for us that He gave His only begotten Son; God's forgiveness; and the opportunity of a new beginning in Christ.

"If you are looking for help and guidance, you can find it in the teaching of the Royal Black Institution," said the Grand Chaplain.

The event then broke for tea and sandwiches, followed by a question-and-answer session in which the three speakers took questions from the floor, before closing with prayer.

Afterwards, Rev Anderson said: "This was an excellent evening and I commend Ross Hall and the organisers for putting together such an interesting programme.

"I was delighted to take part, and, in particular, I was delighted to address so many young people in the audience.

"I am sure everyone learned something new about our wonderful Institution, and I hope they were reassured that we are a strong and vibrant organisation, willing to robustly stand up for the Reformed Faith, and ready to play an active part in our communities."

A religious service was held in the hall, led by Sir Knight Abraham Storey. This was followed by afternoon tea and a display of historic items related to the Preceptory.

Following the service, the Imperial Grand Registrar presented a Bible to the Preceptory. The members of this small border Preceptory were overwhelmed by the support they received on the day and wish to thank all who attended.

The sum of £524 was raised and this was donated to the Air Ambulance charity.

Later, the Preceptory was delighted to receive an invitation from RBP 1000 to attend the Thirteenth in Scarva.

For the first time in its history, the members of RBP 204 paraded in Scarva, led by Drum Accordion Band. The band and Preceptory were delighted by the reception and welcome they received on what was a magnificent day.

A farmer all his life, Sir Knight Dalton also served as a member of the security forces and was a founder member of Maguiresbridge Silver Band. Last June, he celebrated his 100th birthday and was presented with a Bible by his fellow Sir Knights from RBP 1018.

He celebrated Christmas and the New Year with his dear wife and family. His grandchildren were a great joy to him.

Sir Knight Dalton was a wonderful man to have known. He and his family faithfully attended Maguiresbridge Methodist Church.

Deepest sympathies are extended to his wife and the entire family circle.

Mrs Mary Hamilton presents an Honours Plaque in memory of her late husband, Sir Knight Ernest Hamilton, to Donemana RBP 260.

Generous gift presented to Donemana RBP 260

n Honours Plaque has been presented to Donemana RBP 260 by Mrs Mary Hamilton, wife of the late Sir Knight Ernest Hamilton. The plaque was dedicated to his memory from the Hamilton family.

The plaque records Past Masters of the Donemana preceptory, an office which the late Sir Knight Hamilton attained. In his 55 years' membership of the Royal Black Institution, Sir Knight Hamilton was also District Master for Strabane RBDC and a long-time officer for Country Tyrone GBC.

On the evening of the presentation, Mrs Hamilton was accompanied by her daughters and granddaughters, who spoke lovingly of their late father and grandfather. Sir Knight Colin Campbell WM, Donemana RBP 260, gratefully accepted the generous and practical gift and paid tribute to the service of Sir Knight Hamilton. This was echoed by Sir Knight Derek McDermott, Strabane District Master. Also present were visiting District Officers and Sir Knights from Killyclooney and Sollus Bready preceptories. Sir Knight Hamilton was a life-long member of Kildoag LOL 1164, Donemana RBP 260 and the Donemana Branch, Murray Club, of the Apprentice Boys of Derry, as well as other organisations of which he was a dedicated member.

His funeral in April 2018 was attended by many members of the Loyal Orders from across the province and the Ulster Unionist leader, who helped carry his coffin.

His family, whom he adored, erected a plaque on his grave as a fitting tribute to someone who lived for his family and the organisations which he held most dear. It reads: "A Loyal Brother, Sir Knight and Friend, May he rest in God's Presence until we meet again In the Great Lodge Room in the Sky."

Exploring the Black

University student JAMES FRAZER has carried out extensive research into the history of the Royal Black Institution. Here, he explains what motivated him to explore this topic, and he reveals some of his interesting findings

Sir Knight James Frazer is currently studying for a PhD in History at Queen's University.

Y name is James Frazer. I am 23 years old. I live near Rathfriland, Co. Down, and worship at Brookvale Presbyterian Church. I joined the Royal Black Institution in 2017 and I am a member of Mount Horeb RBP 27, Donaghmore (Banbridge District), in which I hold the office of Registrar.

I am currently studying for a PhD in History at Queen's University, Belfast. Last year, I completed a Master of Arts in History. For this, I was required to write a 20,000word dissertation on a topic of my choice. I chose the Royal Black Institution in Ireland c.1797-1914, focusing on its origins, historical development, geographic spread, membership, and function.

Being a member of the organisation, I naturally had a desire to find out more about the history of something in which I had a keen interest as a Sir Knight. I also believed that there was very little known about Royal Black history both in academia and the public sphere and an element of mystery, perhaps even myth, continued to pervade – I wanted to get to the bottom of the Institution's history. Academically, the topic also fitted with my research interests.

To date, my research has primarily focused on political and religious history in nineteenth-century Ireland. I am particularly interested in popular loyalist history (which few scholars have engaged with) as well as evangelicalism in the Church of Ireland (which may seem a strange interest considering I am Presbyterian!). For example, I have previously conducted research on the Battle of Dolly's Brae and the Irish 'Second Reformation' movement.

Although it is not possible to provide a detailed history through the medium of this article, I will summarise my findings and hopefully whet the reader's appetite.

FORMATION

The Royal Black Institution was formed around 1797 as a means of providing additional degrees for the Orange system advancements imparting religious, moral, and esoteric instruction to members. Although September 16, 1797 is a potential date of formation, there is insufficient evidence to confirm the exact time and place that the Order was founded. This lack of evidence is most likely due to the confidential nature of the organisation and its small membership at this time. It may also reflect the fact that it did not have the sanction of official Orangeism or gentry figures, who were content with just two orders of Orange and Purple, with initial leadership being provided by the likes of artisans, small merchants, and farmers.

The degrees of the Institution developed over a number of years and appear to have been influenced by religious principle, the rituals of the Boyne Society (a precursor to the Orange Order), and freemasonry.

Regarding the latter, it is important to note that the influence of freemasonry does not constitute imitation and it is likely, given the prevalence of unofficial masonry in Ulster at this time, that elements were adapted and given alternative meanings within the Black Institution, particularly the emergence of distinct biblical themes.

For instance, knighthood in Masonic orders such as the Knights Templar is inspired by the chivalric orders of the Crusades. However, in the Royal Black Institution, an early member noted that knighthood in the Black Institution was based on an appendant part of the Black degree called 'Gold', which has since disappeared. It described the elevation of Joseph by Pharaoh when he "took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck", thus making "him ruler over all the land of Egypt" (Genesis 41:42-43).

Much of the Institution's early history was marked by disunity. Not only did distinct Irish, English, and Scottish forms of the Black movement develop, the Institution in Ireland at one point had three separate governing bodies. The reconstitution of 1846 restored unity in the Black movement and helped it to expand. The other major development in the period was the role of the Black Institution in forming a Grand Royal Arch Purple Chapter of Íreland in 1911, giving the Institution stability in the source from which it recruited members.

The relationship with the Grand Orange Lodge before the mid-1860s was strained because of their opposition to the existence of the Black Institution. Although religious suspicions may have been at play, their opposition was more likely based on a desire to have sole control over popular loyalism or legal issues connecting the Orange and Black Institutions. It could also be because they believed the elaborate degree system of the Black Order challenged social norms as it gave ordinary Orangemen the opportunity to advance above their gentry superiors in the Grand Orange Lodge.

LEADERSHIP

The leadership of William Johnston of Ballykilbeg between 1855 and 1902 was hugely important for the development of the Institution. Not only did he bring about further unity in the organisation, he helped to settle disputes between the Institution and the Grand Orange Lodge. In addition, as a minor gentry figure, his leadership brought greater respectability to the Institution and made it more acceptable to broader loyalism.

The membership of the Institution was relatively small but grew steadily throughout the period with 4,896 members in 1876 and rising to 14,785 by 1914. The membership was also expanding worldwide as the Black Institution became part and parcel of the Orange diaspora – like the British Empire, the sun never set on the Black Institution.

As stated, this is only a brief overview of my findings. This has been a deeply fulfilling project and I am indebted to many people who have encouraged and helped me along the way. I decided to call my dissertation "A Grand Black Order of Orangemen", which is the earliest recorded name for the Institution. However, I also believe that it speaks of the character of our Order - an Institution that is united by faith, loyalty, and fraternity and committed to the propagation and defence of the biblical truths upon which we are firmly founded.

Sir Knight Frazer's dissertation on the Royal Black Institution in Ireland c.1797-1914 will be available to view at the Royal Black's new headquarters in Loughgall.

Sir Knight Gerry Dorrans receives 70-year service jewel

The August monthly meeting of John Patrick RBP 157 (Coleraine District No 1) was a happy occasion as Sir Knight Gerry Dorrans received his 70-year service bar.

He was also presented with a piece of suitably-inscribed crystal glass in recognition of his faithful service as Registrar by Past Deputy Imperial Grand Master Ivan Kelly, who congratulated Sir Knight Dorrans on his wonderful achievement, thanking him on behalf of the Royal Black Institution and wishing him many years of good health to wear his long service jewel on his colours.

Worshipful Master of RBP 157, William Adams, paid tribute to Sir Knight Dorrans for his loyal and distinguished time in the Institution, thanking him for his continued attendance at monthly meetings where his wise council is always very welcome. He also paid tribute to Sir Knight Dorran's wife, Rachel, and daughter, Rae, who as members of the ladies' committee for a long number of years had both been a great help to the Loyal Orders in Ballywillan.

Sir Knight Dorrans, in replying, said he had enjoyed every minute of his time in the Orders connected with Ballywillan, but if he was to pick a favourite it would be the Royal Black. He said that during his time as Registrar he always knew what was going on but that this presentation had come as a great surprise to him - the present officers were doing a great job, he said, and tonight proved that they could keep a secret!

As Sir Knight Dorrans had reached the ripe young age of 89 two days previously, and the ladies' committee were brought into the meeting and all sang Happy Birthday. Tea, sandwiches, pastries and cake were then partaken, and some chit-chat brought the evening to a close.

Sir Knight Dorrans was born on August 18, 1930. He lost both his father, Thomas H Dorrans, and brother Tommy in separate tragic accidents. Both men had been WM of John Patrick RBP 157.

Sir Knight Dorrans went on to join Ballywillan Sons of William LOL 1022 in 1948. On June 21, 1949, he was proposed as a suitable candidate for the Royal Black Institution, and on August 15, 1949 he was one of 14 young men to be initiated into John Patrick RBP 157. He received his degree of Red Cross on June 16, 1950.

On February 19, 1952 he was elected to the office of Registrar, a position he carried out for 50 years. He was soon called back into action, however, and returned to the post for a second time, serving a further year-and-a-half, making a grand total of 51 years and six months as Registrar.

He carried out this very important task diligently and loyally to many Worshipful Masters over this long period of time.

Sir Gerald Templer – the

The Royal Black Institution is building its new headquarters at 45-47 Main Street, Loughgall, a property which was formerly inhabited by Field Marshal Sir Gerald Templer. Here, historian GORDON LUCY examines the remarkable life of a military man who fought in both world wars, but whose greatest achievement was the defeat of the Communist insurgency in Malaya between 1952 and 1954

ERALD Walter Robert Templer was born on September 11, 1898 at 15 Wellesley Road, Colchester, the son (and only child) of Lieutenant-Colonel Walter Francis Templer, of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, and Mabel Eileen Templer (née Johnston).

Walter Templer was a Loughgall man whereas his mother was the daughter of Major Robert Johnston from County Antrim and was descended from a west of Ireland family.

Young Templer spent much of his boyhood in Co Armagh.

He was educated at Wellington College, the school in Berkshire which was founded as a national memorial to the Duke of Wellington, and at Sandhurst. His time at Wellington was not the happiest period of his life because as a small boy who was not good at games he was severely bullied. As he later admitted: "I loathed and detested my four years at Wellington." Nevertheless, he conceded that he had made numerous friends there.

On the other hand, Templer enjoyed Sandhurst enormously, and claimed that he "was a completely undistinguished cadet from every point of view and passed out – nobody failed at that stage of the First World War because we were so badly needed as cannon fodder – in July 1916, a couple of months before my eighteenth birthday".

On August 16, 1916 he was commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in his father's old regiment but because he was still too young and ineligible for overseas service he was sent to the 3rd (Reserve) Battalion based in Buncrana, Co Donegal.

In mid-October 1917, now aged 19, he was sent to the 7th/8th (Service) Battalion on the Western Front, the carnage of the war of which he was fortunate to survive on at least two occasions. First, shortly after his arrival, his battalion took part in the Battle of Cambrai. His battalion suffered very heavy casualties but he did not take part in the battle.

Secondly, on March 20, he passed out while in the trenches, suffering from acute diphtheria. The following day the Germans launched their Spring Offensive. While he was hospitalised in England, his battalion sustained over 770 casualties out of a strength of some 800 men. He did, however, participate in the victorious Allied advance of August 1918 to the end of the war (the so-called 'Last Hundred Days').

Although he emerged physically unscathed from the Great War (and he appreciated that he was fortunate to have done so), the Great War could scarcely fail but to leave its mark. Many years later he wrote: "I still sometimes in my sleep at night hear the screams of the wounded horses, galloping on the ground, tripping over barbed wire, and treading on their own guts. It was a terrible thing to have to witness, worse in some ways than the human casualties."

A week before his death in October 1979, aged 81, Templer had this dream again, just over sixty years after the end of the Great War.

In the inter-war years he saw service against the Bolsheviks in the Caucasus, attended the army's staff college at Camberley (where he excelled and impressed his instructors including Bernard Law Montgomery) and served in Palestine during the Arab revolt of 1935-6. It was here in the rocky hills of Judea he came to grips with "the mind and method" of terrorists and guerrillas. Although the antagonism between Arab and Jew in Palestine distressed him, he regarded the posting as the best job of his life. His endeavours did not go unnoticed: he was mentioned in dispatches and was awarded the DSO (a comparatively rare distinction for so junior an officer).

On a completely different note, Templer was also an accomplished athlete and had been chosen as a reserve for the 1924 Olympic squad.

During the Second World War, Templer had rose from brevet colonel in 1939 to a general in 1945.

In 1940, he went to France as an intelligence officer on the staff of the British Expeditionary Force. After Dunkirk he was responsible for raising and smiling tiger of Malaya training the 9th Battalion of the Royal Sussex Regiment before taking on command of a brigade in the Home Service Division.

In 1942, he was given command of the 47th Division as a major-general. Shortly after, he commanded II Corps as the Army's youngest lieutenantgeneral.

Between 1943 and 1944 he commanded the 56th Division in Italy, which saw severe fighting in operations around Anzio. He briefly commanded the 6th Armoured Division before being wounded when a land mine blew up the army lorry in front of his staff car while travelling in convoy. The contents of the lorry fell on top of him and damaged his spine, and he was evacuated to England.

He spent the rest of the war on intelligence duties with 21st Army Group as well as heading the German Directorate of SOE (the Special Operations Executive). In the latter role he devised an operation to assassinate Hitler but by this stage the Allies had decided – correctly – that Hitler was a greater liability than an asset to the German cause.

After the war, he was the military governor of the British zone of occupied Germany with the task of feeding the population and administering territory where the social and economic infrastructure had completely collapsed. Infuriated by the failure of the Oberbürgermeister (lord mayor) of Cologne, to take practical steps to improve physical conditions in his city, Templer sacked him for his laziness and incompetence. Actually the mayor was neither but had chosen to concentrate on political matters. The mayor was none other than Dr Konrad Adenauer, the future and first Chancellor of West Germany. Happily, Adenauer did not take Black Institution will transform into its new headquarters. It was formerly inhabited by Field Marshal Sir Gerald Templer. it too personally. Whenever Adenauer visited London, he would always send Templer a case of the best hock.

In 1952, on the advice of Field Marshal Earl Alexander of Tunis, Winston Churchill appointed Templer as High Commissioner and Commanderin Chief in Malaya with the task of defeating the communist insurgency there.

Ironically it was the British who trained and armed the insurgents to fight the Japanese during the Second World War. Chin Peng, the terrorist leader, had even been awarded an OBE for his war service.

One of Templer's outstanding qualities was his clear and analytical mind. He had an enviable capacity to boil a problem down to the essentials.

He appreciated that without a clear political goal, there can be no military victory. Once he had a clear aim, he stuck to it tenaciously. He re-read his list of goals every morning while shaving to remind himself what they were.

He believed passionately in unity of command, forcing policemen, civil servants and soldiers to work together and to share information – whether they liked it or not.

From his time in Palestine he recognised the paramount importance of intelligence. His motto was: "Better a welltargeted ambush than endless jungle bashing." Again, this was a lesson learned from his time in Palestine, even if there were no jungles there. Furthermore, unified intelligence allowed the terrorists to be identified, tracked and attacked. Thereby the hunters became the hunted.

Sound political analysis, good intelligence and well-planned military operations would deliver success. In 1952 he famously observed: "The answer [to the uprising] lies not in pouring more troops into the jungle, but in the hearts and minds of the Malayan people ... the shooting side of this business is only 25% of the trouble and the other 75% lies in getting the people of this country behind us."

He is credited with coining the phrase "hearts and minds".

A key element of this strategy was the creation of new villages for the Chinese community away from the jungle where they were intimidated and terrorised by the Communist insurgents. He encouraged the Chinese to become landowners and offered them citizenship to give them a stake in the country. By winning the "hearts and minds" of the local population he was able to isolate the terrorists so that the terrorists either surrendered or fled across the border. So much so that when Templer moved on in October 1954, government control had been re-established over most of the country.

In 1955 he became Chief of the Imperial General Staff (a position which he retained until 1958) and in the following year he was promoted to field marshal. This was a profoundly unhappy period to be CIGS because it coincided with Suez Crisis and defence cuts.

In retirement, the creation of the National Army Museum became his principal project. He devoted a great deal of time and energy to fundraising for it. That the Museum exists today is largely down to his efforts.

Between 1965 and 1979 he was President of the Society for Army Historical Research.

In 1965 he succeeded Alexander of Tunis as Constable of the Tower of London.

He also was the honorary colonel of a number of regiments, including the Royal Irish Fusiliers (since 1946), the Malay Federation Regiment (from 1954), the 7th Duke of Edinburgh's Own Gurkha Rifles (from 1956), the Royal Horse Guards (from 1963) and the Blues and Royals (from 1969).

Old friends meet up with Young's Memorial oung's Memorial RBP 1187 enjoyed the presence of some old friends amidst their company at the Last Saturday in Dungannon.

Raymond Dunwoody, a Past Master of the Preceptory, and his wife, Odessa, had returned after eight years working for the New Tribes Mission in Papa New Guinea.

They started out at Lae, where they served 14 months, before managing the missionary guest house in Lapilo for seven years where they catered for new missionaries, and came to be regarded as "Granda" and "Nanny" to a lot of missionary children.

Having retired from their service in Papa New Guinea in June 2019, it left them free to join with the preceptory at the Rock, Drumnacanver, Armagh, and they enjoyed the Last Saturday demonstration in Dungannon with the Sir Knights of Young's Memorial RBP 1187. Afterwards, they joined with the Preceptory for the evening meal and celebrations in Young's Black Hall where, in years gone by, Odessa would have been busy preparing for the return of the Preceptory, which was headed by her husband Raymond as Worshipful Master for many years.

The officers and Sir Knights were enormously pleased and honoured to receive the Dunwoodys back to RBP 1187 where they had both done sterling work in previous years.

Raymond and Odessa have since answered the call of duty again and have taken up a new role at the New Tribes Mission UK headquarters in North Cotes, England. Their new role, interacting with new missionaries, will be both different and challenging to their previous duties.

The members of RBP 1187 wish them both God's richest blessing and happiness in their new roles, and look forward to enjoying their company once again in future years to come.

Raymond and Odessa Dunwoody.
